Harbor Homes grateful for veterans funding

Telegraph, The (Nashua, NH) - Wednesday, March 18, 2009

The current economic conditions provide challenges for many in our communities, particularly those with the smallest safety net.

For nearly three decades, Harbor Homes has worked to provide a safety net for those most vulnerable - homeless individuals and families.

However, in 2005 Harbor Homes became aware that there were honorably discharged, homeless veterans in our area; an unthinkable injustice to those men and women who have served our country.

Thanks to the commitment and perseverance of Sen. Judd Gregg and former Sen. John E. Sununu, Buckingham Place opened in 2007 to provide transitional housing in 20 apartments for homeless veterans: men, women and families.

Along with housing, necessary services are provided so these individuals can integrate back into their families and their communities.

Currently, there is a wait list of homeless veterans for Buckingham Place. And once again, grateful thanks to Sen. Gregg and Rep. Paul Hodes for their steadfastness and dedication in locating designated funding to help build the Dalianis House, a second transitional housing project for homeless veterans.

The Dalianis House, which plans to open in 2010, will replicate Buckingham Place. Sen. Gregg and Congressman Hodes were a critical component in making this project happen.

New Hampshire is fortunate to have a Washington delegation that recognizes and puts the needs of its constituents first.
